

Andrea Gyger

From: [REDACTED]
Sent: Wednesday, August 07, 2013 1:59 PM
To: SoS Rulemaking
Subject: Fwd: Comments: Election Rules Recodification

Hello,

I have read through the FAQs in regards to homeless voters and am greatly concerned about the open door to fraud. What does a homeless person need to show as proof as a home base? How does a homeless person show proof of a "valid" mailing address? Will post office boxes that are deemed acceptable be checked to verify the person paying for the box is the homeless elector? My fear is that my rights as an American and Colorado resident can be usurped and voided due to the loopholes created in the new laws. Will you please explain to me what will prevent this? Thanks in advance for your help.

Raymond Schilling

Q2. What address may a "homeless" elector use to register to vote?

A2. A homeless elector may use any address within a specific precinct that he or she regularly returns to and has the intent to remain. That location may be used as the elector's "home base" (residential address) for voter registration purposes.

Q4. What if a homeless person gives a location that does not have a mailing address?

A4. If a homeless person indicates that his or her residence is a physical location that lacks a mailing address, such as a park, then the homeless elector must also give a valid mailing address where he or she can receive correspondence (such as a mail ballot or TABOR notice). Although a homeless person may use any physical location as a residence, a homeless person cannot be registered without providing a valid mailing address.

Q6. Can a post office box be used as a mailing address for voter registration purposes?

A6. Yes. If a homeless elector provides a physical location that does not have a mailing address (such as a park), he/she may provide a post office box as a mailing address only. Post office boxes are acceptable as mailing addresses only; they are never acceptable for residence purposes.

</pre>The contents of this electronic mail message and any attachments are confidential, possibly privileged and intended for the addressee(s) only.
Only the addressee(s) may read, disseminate, retain or otherwise use this message. If received in error, please immediately inform the sender and then delete this message without disclosing its contents to anyone.</pre>