The current rules are very difficult to understand. I think there are many notaries that are only involved to verify signatures on an occasional basis at their place of employment, as a convenience to the employees. I think the training should have different sections for different types of use. All the training should be straight forward: what you have to do, what you cannot do, and what records you need to keep. Most notaries do not have a legal degree, so don't use legalize language; keep it simple.
