Subject: Public Comment Regarding Attempts to Control the vote of the people

The job of the county clerks and of the Secretary of State is to see that people who are not citizens and residents of their state do not vote. This is not difficult to do. All the documents that the state have already approved as proof of identity, etc. are more than adequate. Since many people are upset enough with the government as run by monied interests and their lobbyists, few, if any, will work hard enough to attempt to vote illegally unless paid by those same monied interests.

As I remember the last time the SOS tried to foil the system and claimed that a lot of illegal votes were cast or attempted the final proof came up with about 38 people.. This is hardly enough to throw an election and it is entirely possible that these were legal votes cast.

Isn't it time that elected officials stop trying to prevent the electorate from voting for someone other than themselves? Is it not possible for members of any party to get elected honestly and without lying?

Albert Einstein is rumored to have said that one cannot solve a problem with the same thinking that led to it. Time to change our thinking and our actions. And those thoughts and actions which attempt to prevent citizens from voting are immoral.
