Thank you for the opportunity to comment. The vote is the absolute sacrosanct cornerstone of the American Republic. Given the capabilities of modern hackers, who have gotten into some of the most secure government and private computer systems in the world, there is no reason to believe that the future of this country could not be irrevocably damaged by widespread voter fraud. Please do everything possible to require positive identification for every voter. You can't buy a drink without a photo ID. It would be incredibly dangerous to expose this bedrock of our constitutional government to the threat of widespread Internet voting.

Thank you for your consideration,

Bob and Irene Edmiston
